

Lonely at BYU? — be a friend

Ever feel like you're the ONLY ONE at BYU? Well, obviously no one is, and that's probably the exact reason why many students share a feeling of loneliness.

It's hard to be a "little fish in a big pond," especially if you are accustomed to being a "big fish in a little pond," as many students who are new to campus were. To quote a popular song, "I may be lonely, but I'm never alone."

Fish or no fish, pond or no pond, and new student or continuing student, the problem still remains that on a campus of nearly 27,000 students, at one time or another many members of the student-body feel alone.

Last year 75 of the freshmen who had left BYU before the end of the first block said they did so because they were lonely and they felt like they didn't belong.

One young woman said, "Many times as I walk silently across campus, I feel that no one wants to talk to me and I immediately translate that into a feeling of loneliness."

"But I don't think that is the real problem. The real problem is that many people think everyone else is ignoring them and they don't want to be rejected."

Bishop William Jacob of BYU's 43rd Ward says loneliness is a major problem on campus, but there is an answer.

"You need to be involved in activities and with being someone's friend because even if you aren't lonely, someone who is lonely needs you."

Want to be involved in a contagious cure? Make it a point to smile and/or greet each person that you pass for one week. No doubt you'll get strange looks for a while, but people will respond to you.

Not only would this help someone else who might be feeling left out, but it will make you feel like YOU belong at BYU. Even if you don't experience this "left out" feeling, chances are that every day you walk pass a dozen people who need someone to smile at them.

Why can't we be more friendly? There is no reason for anyone to feel alone or unwanted at BYU.

The old adage still holds true — if you want to have a friend, then just be a friend first.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of the Daily Universe, which consists of the editor, the editorial page editor, a student staff member, a teacher of opinion writing and the associate publisher; the opinions expressed are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration, its student body or sponsoring church. HAVE A HUNK
OF BROTHERHOOD!

It was all I had

Editor:

To the person who took my calculator (HP37E): This calculator functions on a rechargeable battery pack only. Since it will soon be running down, and the thought of it ending up in the trash keeps me up nights, I would like to offer you the lonely recharger pack that has no purpose in life without its calculator mate.

Although the calculator is obsolete by today's standards, it will always hold a place in my heart. Enjoy it — it was all I had.

Don't feel guilty. I'll just add it to my Christmas list — right after a decent pair of shoes, next semester's tuition and books, and a couch. On the other hand, I suppose it wouldn't hurt me to sit on the floor for another semester.

Better testing

Editor:

Waiting in long lines at (or outside) the testing center is not pleasant.

No one needs the anxiety of waiting added into the pressures of a test. I work in the testing center and have some suggestions that if followed, could make the lines go more quickly and possibly prevent long ones.

1. Don't wait until the last day or hour to take your test. This is the number one cause of long lines. Know the starting date and deadline of your test and prepare early.
2. Take your test in the morning when the lines are usually shorter. The morning shift needs to work anyway.
3. Put your books in the blue bag before you come to the counter and seal the bag with tape yourself.
4. Have your I.D. out before you get to the counter. Oh, and try to keep it out of your mouth.

5. Have your money ready if you need to pay a fee or buy anything.
6. Know the catalog name and number of the class for which you're testing, the section number, and the instructor's name. Physical descriptions of your teacher only make us laugh.

I think you'll find these ideas helpful and they might make your next visit to the testing center more enjoyable. No, I really mean that. If you still run into problems, talk to me. I'm Ralph — the tall one.

A liberal's a liberal

Editor:

We strongly disagree with the Universe Opinion of Oct. 13, which claimed that labels such as liberal or communist fail to accurately depict that person's views.

The terms liberal, conservative or moderate, whatever their origin, have come to define in the modern context a person's views, including his voting record.

To claim that labeling Wayne Owens a liberal ignores his voting record, is to admit ignorance of the American political process. People are not just indiscriminately labeled "liberal" or "conservative" or whatever. Their views on a broad spectrum of topics — as demonstrated by their voting record if they have one — are carefully analyzed before categorizing these individuals.

Further, lest you forget, it is the media (your brethren in vocation) that generally impose these labels on political participants. Let's not blame the Republicans for labeling Owens a liberal, just as we won't blame the Democrats for Reagan being called a conservative. Let's call a spade a spade (or would you suggest asking the spade?)

Shape up ad

Editor:

The advertisements that appear regularly in your Monday edition that promote figure shaping by surgical means are offensive. Perhaps I am not acquainted with these techniques, but it is my understanding that:

To change one's shape permanently, the lifestyle of the person, i.e. physical activity and diet, must change permanently.

The type of surgery offered in the advertisements can only be safely done on small portions of the body and, therefore, will affect minimally the overall body shape. Any surgery causes trauma, and is only advised when the patient cannot be helped through safer means.

Finally, these advertisements do not seem to be targeted at those few whose personal health needs require surgery. Nor is the success of the surgery on those who really require it such that the patient may be photographed for pin-up purposes. Is the photograph even appropriate for The Daily Universe? Please remove, authenticate, or tone down.

Bearing the Weight of Nuclear War

NEWS DIGEST

Phillipine minister may resign

CEBU CITY, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said Sunday the cabinet will break up if President Corazon Aquino asks him to resign over his opposition to her peace policy toward communist rebels.

The 62-year-old minister, who held the same post under ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos, gave the warning during a radio talk show. He said other Cabinet members have asked him to step down or stop publicly criticizing the peace policy.

Asked if he would resign, Enrile said he would "think about it when the time comes."

"The government is a coalition government," Enrile said. "And I think if they ask for the resignation of any member of the coalition, well, that means the Cabinet will have to be dissolved."

It was not clear if Enrile envisioned Mrs. Aquino as having to step down in event of a Cabinet break-up. He recently said that by dissolving Marcos' constitution, she revoked her legal basis for authority. Enrile apparently sees Mrs. Aquino as holding power solely because of an alliance between him and other leaders of the revolt that forced Marcos into exile in February of this year.

Enrile's statements marked the latest stage in a growing rift between him and Mrs. Aquino over strategy for ending the 17-year-old insurgency by the communist New People's Army.

France, Spain win 1992 Olympics bids

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Barcelona, Spain, ending a long hunt and Albertville, France, beginning a dream, won the host roles Friday for the 1992 Summer and Winter Olympics.

The International Olympic Committee gave Barcelona, Spain's second largest city, the nod to host the Summer Games over five rivals, with Paris running a distant second. The victory came on the third of a possible six rounds.

For Albertville, a town of 30,000 in the Savoy Alps of eastern France, the triumph came on the fifth of seven possible ballots.

As the IOC voted for the final time on winter and summer sites for the same year, the committee's president, Juan Antonio Samaranch, announced that he would meet Saturday with North Korean representatives.

He said he was going to try again to solve a political problem threatening the 1988 Games in Seoul.

He said that he had met in Havana with Premier Fidel Castro last month to discuss the same situation.

Samaranch also said that strict limits would be imposed on future bidders, after campaigns for 1992 that lasted for years and ran up bills totaling an estimated $100 million for some of the cities who wanted to be the chosen host to the games.

Arms questions still unanswered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although administration officials are still debating what exactly the Soviets laid on the table in Reykjavik, the consensus is that both sides were willing to throw away enough high-priced hardware over 10 years to make the world a safer place.

If the deal had been sealed, it would have drastically changed the way the United States and the Soviet Union deter each other from nuclear attack.

In Iceland, the Soviets and Americans were near agreement on a plan to chop strategic nuclear bomber and missile forces by about half over five years, greatly reducing the threat that a misunderstanding or a technical foul-up could destroy civilization in minutes.

The aim would be to reduce the number of Soviet land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles, an area in which they have the edge, and of U.S. submarine-launched ballistic missiles, an area of American advantage.

"Ballistic missiles are particularly dangerous weapons because they can strike in minutes. They can't be recalled once launched," said Edward Rowny, one of President Reagan's chief arms negotiators.

Miners want to know cause of deaths

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal agency's conclusion that a faulty air compressor ignited the 1984 Wilberg Mine fire does not explain why 27 miners died, say union officials pressing for further investigation.

"The problem is this: the agency has focused its attention on a narrowly constructed aspect of what caused the fire," said Joe Main, director of health and safety for the United Mine Workers Union. "They are not going to address the issue of what caused the death of 27 miners," he said.

Herschel Potter, chief investigator for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration, led the 22-month probe. He announced preliminary findings three weeks ago, saying the fire began at a compressor that had been rigged to operate with its on-off switch and heat sensor shutoff disconnected.

Potter said from the outset that his mandate was to identify the cause of the fire, not factors that led to the miners' deaths.

But UMW has criticized that focus, contending investigators also should have analyzed the Wilberg's fire detection and suppression systems, its communications and the mine design that left the victims no escape.

Afghan leader wants reconciliation

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghan leader Najibullah, now in his sixth month as head of a Moscow-backed government, says reconciliation with Moslem guerillas is his main goal and that he envisions political parties in the future.

Najibullah, 40, also indicated that he is not trying to impose a soviet system on Afghanistan, but seeks an independent path.

He spoke during a 2 1/2 hour meeting late Saturday night with Western reporters who were invited to Afghanistan to witness the withdrawal of six Soviet regiments, or between 5,000 to 8,000 soldiers.

According to Western estimates, about 113,000 Soviet troops have been stationed in Afghanistan since 1979 to help the government fight the nationwide Moslem uprising.

Bomb scare at Lakeridge ends without any injuries

By LANE WILLIAMS

Universe Staff Writer

Orem Police have no suspects following a bomb-scare at Lakeridge Junior High School in Orem Friday.

According to Orem Police Detective Bruce Wilkins, a gift-wrapped bomb was defused near the school after an alert employee at the school noticed the bomb's fuse.

A teacher had first found the bomb in a hallway at the school at about 8:45 a.m. She thought it was a student's misplaced package and carried it to the school's lost and found.

The package's lid somehow became slightly ajar and the employee at the lost and found saw the fuse. The employee immediately notified the principal, Brent Bird, who called Orem Police and evacuated the school, the detective said.

Orem officers, dispatched to the scene, took the bomb to a nearby field where a bomb expert from the Provo Police Department, Captain Duane Fraser, defused it.

The bomb had been set to explode had the lid been removed. Although no one was hurt in the incident, it was a "potentially bad situation," Wilkins said.

The contents of the bomb were taken to the state crime lab in Salt Lake City where an analysis of the exact contents will be made. Wilkins said the bomb was probably not associated with the bombs uncovered by a police raid in Salt Lake City Wednesday.

Police discovered about 100 pipe bombs and the makings for some 200 more during the raid.

The bomb found at Lakeridge was not a pipe bomb and was "very amateurish," Wilkins said.

Police found no other bombs at the school. Students returned to their classes after a 20-30 minute recess.

Soviets expel U.S. diplomats

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union expelled five U.S. diplomats on Sunday, five days after the last of 25 Soviet U.N. envoys ordered out of the United States returned home.

A Kremlin official linked the expulsions to the U.S. order against the Soviet U.N. diplomats. In Washington, Secretary of State George Shultz responded, "We will protest and we will take some action."

Sunday's expulsions of four diplomats in Moscow and one in Leningrad were announced by the official news agency, Tass. It said in a brief report that the Foreign Ministry determined they had engaged in "impermissible activities," a phrase for espionage.

The five are Jack Robert of the U.S. consulate in Leningrad and four diplomats from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow: William Norville, a first secretary, Charles Ehrenfried, a third secretary, and attaches Gary Lonquist and David Harris.

The Tass announcement did not mention the U.S. expulsions of the Soviet diplomats from the United Nations, but Georgy Arbatov, a chief Kremlin spokesman, indicated that the Soviets were retaliating.

Arbatov spoke in a satellite interview from Moscow on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

"The Americans will (see that) Mr. Gorbachev is a very forthcoming man if he has good partners. But if you behave in such a way he becomes very tough," Arbatov said, referring to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"It can cool down to zero in both countries if you go on this way of retaliation after retaliation," Arbatov added.

Shultz, appearing on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press," said it is up to President Reagan to decide what action to take.

Donald Regan, the White House chief of staff, said on "Face the Nation," "I'm disappointed to see that (the expulsions). I thought that after Reykjavik, relationships would have improved somewhat. We are now going to have to consider taking appropriate action...to consider what our alternatives are."

Neither Shultz nor Regan would elaborate on the possible U.S. responses.

Divorce battles may prompt false child abuse charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fathers seeking custody of their offspring during divorce battles are increasingly subject to false accusations that they sexually molested their children, psychiatrists said Friday.

The therapists blamed greater public awareness of sexual abuse, laws requiring teachers and doctors to report even unsubstantiated accusations, careless counselors who interview alleged victims, and joint custody laws that spur mothers to fight harder for sole custody of their children.

The custody laws and changing moral values mean mothers "have got to get a little more vicious and come up with something better than adultery" accusations against their estranged husbands during custody battles, said Dr. Diane Schetky, a child psychiatrist from Rockport, Maine.

Experts lack reliable statistics documenting the increase in unfounded molestation allegations, said Schetky and other therapists who delivered papers about the trend during the annual meeting of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry held last week.

Court-appointed therapists who investigate such claims "uniformly report a marked increase in false allegations of sexual abuse arising in contested custody cases," said Melvin Guyer, a University of Michigan psychologist-lawyer who evaluates custody cases for Michigan judges.

"False sexual abuse allegations are rare to begin with, but the area where they're (increasingly) common is in contested custody disputes," and fathers are almost always the targets, said Dr. Spencer Eth, a psychiatrist at the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Eth warned that false claims of molestation in divorce cases "should not discredit allegations of sexual abuse of children who are not in contested custody cases. Most of these allegations are truthful."

Most false accusations of molestations are made sincerely, not intentionally, Guyer said.

"A mother would say that little Sally came back from a visit with her dad, she was quiet, she looked tired, she was weepy, she wasn't herself, her tummy hurt," he explained. "Then the child has a diaper rash, and the mother puts all the pieces together and says, 'I think something happened."

Guyer said many false accusations don't involve outright molestation, but such statements as the father "walks around the house in his underwear in front of his child or he bathes with little Billy."

"In an adversarial divorce, what was innocent during the marriage becomes suspect," Schetky said.

Understanding the issues: What does the arms race mean?

By Allen
Staff Writer

Complete abolition of nuclear weapons is seen by some as the only way to make the world safe, by others it is seen as a recipe for suicide.

Nuclear disarmament is psychologically impossible for the Russians, and would probably be suicide for the United States, said J. Bart Czurr, an adjunct professor of at BYU didn't say it's impossible. I would say it's a bit of a stretch, said Ray C. Hillam, director of the David M. Center for International Studies.

Both say they believe that the burden of the arms race is on the danger of nuclear war must be stopped, but that realism is rooted in an understanding of the political people who control nuclear weapons.

Understanding the terms which are associated with arms and arms control is vital to understanding the surrounding arms talks and nuclear issues.

Issues of nuclear arms control are complex, but experts agree that the underlying premise is MAD.

Mutually Assured Destruction
MAD is an acronym for mutually assured destruction, commonly used in discussing nuclear arms issues. As long as any potential enemy knows that a nuclear attack on the United States will result in an equally devastating attack on their own nation, they will have little reason to attack the U.S., according to a report prepared by the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At BYU, Martin B. Hickman, professor of political science, currently teaches a class dealing with national issues described MAD as a "robust deterrence It's not like MAD, but I think for the time being it's all we've got," said Hillam.

There are two main types of nuclear weapons, strategic weapons and tactical weapons.

Strategic Weapons
Strategic nuclear weapons are the kind most often referred to in discussions on arms control. Strategic nuclear weapons are those which can strike at an enemy from a long distance, such as inter-continental ballistic missiles, ICBMs, said Hickman.

Tactical Weapons
Tactical nuclear weapons, often referred to as battlefield or theater nuclear weapons, are smaller and have shorter range, they are used in the place of conventional artillery. There are currently no treaties regulating tactical nuclear arms, said Hickman.

The issues surrounding nuclear weapons are complex, but not beyond the grasp of the average citizen. White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan said last year while preparing for the summit in Geneva, that the women of America were not interested in technical details of the arms race, like throw-weights. This may be because few simple explanations of such terms are available in the media.

Delivery, Warheads and Weight
There are two main considerations in discussing strategic nuclear weapons, delivery systems and warheads. A warhead is an actual nuclear bomb. A warhead is typically not very large, a cone about five feet tall, two feet across at its base.

A delivery system is how the nuclear bomb reaches the target. Nuclear bombs may be carried by an ICBM, a cruise-missile, a submarine-launched missile, or a long-range bomber. A single missile may contain more than one warhead. The amount of weight a missile is able to carry, is called its throw-weight. Throw-weight determines how many warheads may be carried on a missile.

When several warheads are carried on a single missile it is called a MIRV, multiple, independently targetable reentry vehicle. Each warhead on a MIRV can have a different target.

For example, one MIRV missile with five warheads could strike Provo, Salt Lake City, Tooele Army Depot, Hill Air Force Base, and Ogden all at the same time.

The explosive force of more than 7,000 pounds of TNT exists for every person on the Earth, according to one expert.

The power of a nuclear bomb, called its yield, is measured in the equivalence to the more common explosive TNT. Some warheads have up to a 20 megaton yield. A 20 megaton warhead has the explosive force of 20 million tons, or 40 billion pounds, of TNT.

First-strike, Second-strike
Current theory is that there will be two parts of a nuclear war, a first-strike and second-strike.

The first-strike is generally called preemptive, or counter-force, because the objective of the first strike is to prevent an opponent from being able launch a counter-attack, or second-strike with its nuclear forces.

The second-strike capability is at the heart of MAD. United States Military Posture - Fiscal Year 1987, a report published by the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, outlines U.S. policy for defense and retaliation in the event of a first-strike. Nuclear missiles from submarines, bombers and installations not destroyed on the ground would be used to devastate the enemy.

The Soviets have a similar policy should the U.S. launch its own first-strike.

Both the U.S. and the Soviet Union see their first and second-strike capabilities as critical to their national security. Each maintains the threat of a first-strike as a tool to keep the other from politically or militarily unacceptable behavior. Each maintains a second-strike capability to insure that the other will not attempt a first-strike.

Tactical nuclear weapons are not seen in the same light as strategic nuclear weapons. The deterrence for their use is not as strong.

No to No First Use
The U.S. has declined to enter a "No First Use" pact with the Soviets, according to Eric Anthony Jones, assistant professor of political science.

The U.S. wants to hold open the option of using tactical nuclear weapons to respond to conventional type attacks in Western Europe or elsewhere, said Jones.

Nuclear Freeze
Nuclear freeze is another term associated with arms control. This refers to a stoppage in the build-up of nuclear arms. The difficulty with a freeze is that each side tends to believe that the other is slightly ahead in nuclear armaments, and they don't want to agree to a freeze that will leave them weaker than their opponent, said Hickman.

Arms limitation
Arms limitation has had slightly more success. The SALT II agreement, although it was never ratified by congress, has been followed for the last seven years, and is the standard by which we have judged nuclear arms progress, said Jones.

Disarmament
Disarmament is the most difficult issue because it leaps beyond limitation and freezes and seeks to eliminate existing weapons. Existing nuclear weapons are what the U.S. and Soviet Union count on for their national security, according to Hickman.

People who want the U.S. to disarm unilaterally in hopes that the Soviets will follow do not understand the psychology of Soviet leaders, said Czurr.

The Soviets are not likely to disarm to very low levels because the Chinese, British and French also have nuclear weapons which they perceive as threatening, he said.

SDI
Into this delicate balance enters the strategic defense initiative, SDI or "Star Wars," a proposed system for destroying nuclear missiles and warheads before they can reach their targets.

The Soviets fear that if SDI works it will make U.S. nuclear forces invulnerable, and allow the U.S. to launch a nuclear first-strike without fear of retaliation.

Facts outweigh myths - Statman finds BYU co-ed jokes obsolete

"Hey, Spruce, mail! Looks like a letter to Statman. Let's see."
 "Hm. This looks like a job for Statman."
 "What does it say?"

Dear Statman,
 This week I went over to my boyfriend's house.

When I arrived, I found that he and some friends were in the middle of a coed joke revival meeting. I couldn't believe my ears at the slaughter of physical character a woman goes through. I challenged them to a bet. I said that the average BYU coed was average in body fat for the optimum weight, which they could set. They said the optimum weight for a coed should be around 120 pounds. So, Statman, could you settle our differences, by finding the average weight and percent body fat of BYU coeds. Thanks for your help.
 Signed,
 Joked Out
 P.S. If I win, I get a steak dinner!

"Boy, Statman, I don't know if we should do this one. If she's wrong, it could mean an onslaught of coed jokes on campus."
 "Yes Andy, it could, but I think the population of BYU has a right to know. Come, Andy--to the stat cave!"

Later, after visiting the College of Physical Education where they recorded data from the records of P.E. 129 students. (P.E. 129 is a required course so a random sample taken from such records should be representative of coeds).
 "Boy, Statman, they sure were helpful. I learned a lot about the difference in body fat in men and women. Let's go back to the stat cave to analyze the data."

One hour later--"Wow, Statman, she is really going to put it in the face of those jokesters!"
 "Yes, Robot, she will be able to. After looking at the data carefully, we find that the average weight of a BYU coed in the sample is 124.3 pounds. And we are 95 percent confident that the true average for all BYU coeds falls between 118.8 and 129.8 pounds. Also in the area of body fat, the coeds did very well. We calculated a sample average percent body fat of 20.24 and are 95 percent confident that the true average percent body fat for all BYU coeds falls between 19.56 and 20.92 percent.

Mikhail Gorbachev--a ballet dancer?

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev — he's that Russian ballet dancer, isn't he?

A college professor who decided to test students' knowledge of big names in history, literature and current events found most were better at identifying soap opera stars.

"I think students today are as bright and motivated as those of 20 years ago," said Judith Remy Leder, an English teacher at California State University in Fullerton. "They're just not into current events unless touched by them."

While 60 percent of the students she quizzed had heard of Gorbachev, most didn't know his job — general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, leader of the Soviet Union. One student guessed Gorbachev was a writer and three thought he was a ballet dancer.

Fewer than half could identify Geoffrey Chaucer, the early English author of "Canterbury Tales" or Desmond Tutu, the South African archbishop and Nobel laureate.

Just 10 percent had heard of Alexander Hamilton, the nation's first treasury secretary, despite his prominence on the $10 bill.

But 60 out of 100 students said they were familiar with Erika Kane, a character on the television soap opera "All My Children."

OCTOBER 20-25 HOMECOMING

Retailers

Meet the executives during Retail Career Days October 20-31

want BYU students

Learn what it takes to be an executive

Purpose of Retail Career Days

Most college students don't understand what a retail executive does. Activities of Retail Career Days not only include recruiting of interns and graduates, but also store orientations. Visitors will also participate in class presentations, panel discussions and Executive Lectures — all with the goal of upgrading students' understanding of what executives do and executive career opportunities with their companies.

Not only for business students

When most people think of retailing, they think of merchandising — the buying or store management functions. Merchandising is the heart of retailing, but there are other executive opportunities as well: store operations, sales promotion, human resource development, financial control and electronic data processing.

Because of this wide range of required executive talent, the Skaggs Institute works with not only business management, but with nine other undergraduate programs and three graduate programs. Undergraduate programs include: accounting, information management, clothing and textiles, communications, agricultural economics, computer science, managerial economics, design and prior environment. The graduate programs are: master of business administration, master of accounting and master of organizational behavior.

Retailers want grads with Liberal Arts degrees too

Although many retailers prefer students with business or retailing backgrounds, there are those who prefer a broad background of a Liberal Arts degree.

Not for seniors only

Sophomores and juniors particularly are invited to attend orientation sessions to learn about executive career opportunities. If you find that one of these career paths sounds interesting, you are in an excellent position to better prepare for a successful executive career. Select several orientations sessions that you would like to attend. Your questions will be welcomed.

Visiting executives will be busy

* Company orientations

Executives will brief students regarding their companies and the executive career opportunities with them — a must for students interested in learning about the company. Students who are signed up for recruiting and internship interviews should attend. All students are welcome.

Every company will hold orientation sessions. The date of the orientations, time and room number is written below on each ticket.

Executive Lecture

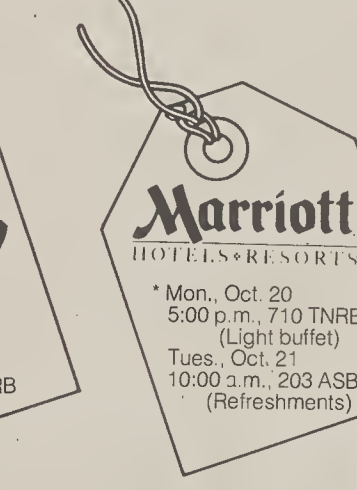

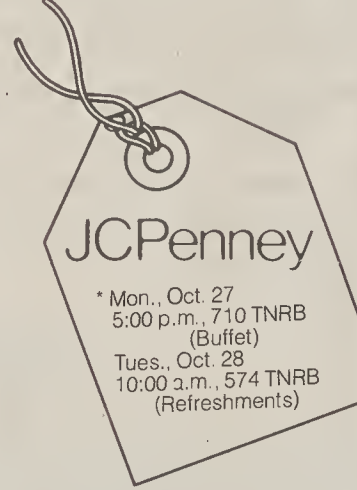

Donald R. Clarke, chairman, Venture Stores, St. Louis, Missouri, is the featured executive of Retail Career Days and will speak on "Achieving Positive Financial Results in a Competitive Environment," Thursday, October 30, 4:00 p.m., 151 TNRB.

Class presentations and panel discussions

Students are welcome to attend any of these on a space available basis. Classes or panel discussions will involve a wide variety of subjects.

Where can you learn more?

At the Retail Career Days information bulletin board, first floor Tanner Building opposite Rooms 120 and 130; Skaggs Institute of Retail Management, 480 Tanner Building; and at the Placement Center, D-240 ASB.

* Company Orientations will be held at these times

Why we insist on having 'Star Wars'

By J. ALLEN
Universe Staff Writer

The strategic defense initiative, SDI or "Star Wars" as it has been called, may not work and should be used as a negotiating tool with the Soviet Union, according to some BYU professors.

SDI, as an absolute shield against nuclear weapons, is technologically impractical, said Martin B. Hickman, professor of political science. "I do not believe in SDI as a leak-proof system," said Hickman.

Ray C. Hillam, director of the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies, agreed the technology required to make SDI work was uncertain at present. "I'm skeptical of SDI," said Hillam. "I think it should go on the negotiating block."

SDI was the point of disagreement which prevented an arms agreement at the recent summit between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev.

In a speech Monday, Reagan defended his commitment to the missile-destroying system.

"The General Secretary wanted to kill SDI," he said, "I told him that I had promised the American people that I would not."

Reagan first proposed SDI in March 1983, but the idea was not entirely new. The United States and Soviet Union had signed a treaty in 1972 limiting the development and deployment of anti-ballistic missiles, or ABMs. ABMs are missiles used to defend against in-coming nuclear missiles, much like SDI.

According to Eric Anthony Jones, assistant professor of political science, the ABM treaty was signed to prevent the balance of nuclear power from tipping too far to either side. The Soviets fear that SDI will tip the nuclear scales in favor of the U.S.

Jones said that while he favored SDI, he did not believe that the U.S. could ever rely solely on SDI. He said the nuclear balance between the U.S. and the Soviet Union was primarily a matter of perception, and that threats to that perception were as dangerous as threats to the actual balance of nuclear power.

According to published reports, the U.S. plans to spend close to $1-trillion on SDI over a period of years.

"It's a pretty expensive bargaining chip," said Hickman. "If it's only a bargaining chip, we had better get on with a deal."

Hickman said that SDI might have value in protecting U.S. strategic nuclear forces, helping to insure U.S. second-strike capability.

Research for SDI is one of the reasons the Reagan Administration has declined to join the Soviets in a ban on nuclear weapons testing. The Soviets are in the second year of their self-imposed ban on testing.

Their test ban gives the Soviets an edge in the propaganda war, said Hillam. Vital strategic interests override propaganda concerns, so that U.S. has decided that nuclear testing and SDI have greater value than a try for positive world opinion, he said.

The Reagan Administration may not have done all its homework on SDI, according to J. Bart Czirr, an adjunct professor of physics.

Czirr, who worked for 14 years as a scientist at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, said that even though experts are running the program they may not have considered all of the ramifications.

When the MIRV program was first developed in the U.S. it was seen as an advancement in nuclear weapons technology which would improve the U.S. deterrent capability, said Czirr.

Some people fear a nuclear war is only a matter of time. Others think President Reagan's 'Star Wars' plan will deter a war.

A political view on arms control

Democrats want treaties

The Democratic view on nuclear arms favors arms control treaties. They do not believe a greatly increased defense system is the answer.

Democrats do not agree with President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative. A report from the Democratic Study Group calls the 'Star Wars' plan a 'Strategically Deficient Initiative.'

The study group, headed by James L. Oberstar (D-Minn.) contends "SDI supporters admit that the testing and development of SDI will ultimately lead the U.S. to violate one of the most important arms control treaties to date -- the antiballistic missile treaty (ABM) of 1972."

The report claims that the ABM Treaty is widely regarded as one of the primary reasons why there has not been wide scale competition between the two superpowers in defensive systems.

"Arms control supporters see little sense in prematurely abandoning the treaty for a program which is so highly experimental and potentially destabilizing," the report said.

The Democrats also disagree with the abandoning of SALT II by the Reagan administration.

"Most arms control experts outside the administration believe that abandoning the SALT II treaty will cause serious military, diplomatic and budgetary problems for the United States," the report said.

The Democrats say the Soviets are in a much stronger position than the United States to rapidly expand their nuclear forces now that SALT II is scrapped.

The Democrats do not believe the case against the Soviets, as far as SALT II violations are concerned, is clear-cut. They say the two charges the administration has made are that the Soviets have deployed a new ICBM (the SS-25), which is against provisions of the treaty; and that the Soviets have built a new radar facility which violates the restrictions of the 1972 ABM treaty.

"Many analysts agree with the Soviet contention that the differences between the SS-25 missile and an earlier version are not great enough to qualify as a 'new' missile," the report says. "Arms control analysts are divided over whether the radar violates the 1972 ABM treaty. Some believe the radar cannot be used for purposes which violate the ABM treaty, while others conclude that it probably does."

They prefer freeze and reduction in arms over build-up.

Republicans like defense

Republicans think the strategic defense initiative has restored American respect throughout the world and within the country. They believe in the pursuit of peace through strength.

A report from the Republican party in Washington, D.C. said President Reagan has launched a defense modernization program which will aid in the quest for peace.

The SDI research tops the list. Also included are the MX peacekeeper missiles, the Midgetman missiles, the B-1B bombers, Trident submarine missiles, and U.S. satellite security in the form of anti-satellite weapons.

The Republican's report says President Reagan took leadership of a country whose defense capability had "serious problems."

"A decade of underfunding U.S. military forces had resulted in the loss of strategic superiority," the report says. "The U.S. carried out only limited number of forces improvements to its strategic weapons during the 1970's and also greatly reduced it number of nuclear weapons."

The Republican report claims that over the past 15 years, the Soviet Union's conventional and nuclear arsenals had escalated to a point "clearly beyond what the Soviets might need for legitimate defensive purposes."

The report says the Reagan administration understood that the disparity between U.S. and Soviet capabilities had to be lessened. "Weakness would invite aggression. Rebuilding U.S. defenses was absolutely vital," the report said.

Reagan's plan is to rebuild U.S. defenses and to coordinate an arms control agenda "that seeks to obtain significant, verifiable and mutual arms reductions to equal force levels," the report says.

The Republicans agree that the Soviets have the advantage in most areas of defense, including aircraft, submarines, tanks and artillery besides nuclear arms.

"Each Soviet SS-18 missile carries 10 warheads (and potentially 14) and has more explosive power than all the bombs dropped in World War II," says the report. "These 308 SS-18s alone can deliver more destructive power than all U.S. strategic missiles combined."

The Republicans say the Soviets have modernized its missiles while the U.S. has not. It was for this reason that President Reagan ordered the MX peacekeeper missiles and the Midgetman to be deployed in the country, says the report.

Im students sacrifice much

FREY HAMPTON

YU students would be horrified if they had to $5,000 for one course. There are some student directors who have to beg and borrow all summer to raise five grand for 580R filmmaking class. Students' stories are selected each year from a writing class offered in the winter semester. The students must raise enough money to produce their own film for the 580R class, offered the following fall or spring. Students whose stories were not selected help with production of the six films, which can only be 10 minutes long. The class is nine credit hours. Students don't realize how much dedication is required of them as a student," said David Shearer, instructor of the 580R class. "The amount of dedication shown by these students is rare." Lake wrote one of this fall's selected scripts. "I was pretty excited," he said. "But it's quite a challenge." Lake began raising money to produce his film at the end of the spring semester and worked at it all summer. "My budget is $5,000. I worked and I contacted people to raise a tax write-off," he said. "It took me three months to raise the money." Lake starts shooting this week, which is the culmination of several preparatory steps. He had to "fine tune" his script, raise $5,000, find a location to shoot and select a cast. Then comes what Lake calls the "fun time."

m industry has strong impact on life

FREY HAMPTON
se Staff Writer

BYU film majors are "groomed in the direction" of making films which depict the happier and uplifting events of life. Shearer was a student in 580R just last year. The film he did for that class was judged as one of the seven best student films in the nation by the Academy of Motion Pictures, Arts and Sciences. "Filmmaking is one of the most highly competitive professions," said Shearer. "The Directors' Guild has 8,000 members. Only 100 are working. We want the class to be a preparation for that competitive experience." Shearer believes dedicated filmmaking students could team up to make the type of films that do not need sex and violence to draw a substantial audience. Steven Spielberg and George Lucas teamed up with friends from college before they earned a big name. "If we do that, we all get credibility and become known," said Shearer. "I hope we can be a force for good, inspiring people. Show that life is worth living — not all families are broken and not all husbands cheat."

Fear can be fun in a castle

By LORIE FUNK
Universe Staff Writer

In an old, stone castle behind a state mental institution, preparations are being finalized for a very frightful and somewhat therapeutic Halloween experience.

That experience is the Utah State Hospital's 17th annual Haunted House, which begins at 7 p.m. Oct. 24 and will run until midnight of the scariest night of the year, Halloween.

With a $2 ticket going to patient recreation funds, people should be prepared for the event that was voted "scariest haunted house" last year by a local radio station.

Both patients and volunteers have spent numerous hours preparing the castle, costumes and special effects, and many involved seem excited to get things under way.

"I can't wait to begin scaring people," said Roger, a hospital patient. "Since this is the first time I've been involved in the haunted house it should be really interesting."

Roger will be stationed in the lab room, "it's the opposite side of 'MASH,'" he said.

"This is my second year," said Randy, another patient. "I love watching the people come through and seeing the total fear on their faces. I even had a football player pass out on me and fall back onto four other people in line."

Another patient, Kelly, said that after a few hours of scaring people they began to entertain themselves. "We come up with all kinds of stuff to scare people once it gets old and boring," he said. "Last year our room began chasing people with the 'biting paper cup' just to have fun."

Kelly said he enjoyed watching the people "freak," yet knew himself that it was not really scary.

Janina Chilton, the haunted house director said patients earn the privilege of working at the castle on the basis of good behavior.

"If patients are not working up at the castle, we try to get as many involved as possible working with costumes, sets, crowd control, parking cars and refreshments for the other workers," she said.

Minnie Johnson, a psychiatric and recreational aide at the hospital, said she has been involved in the castle since its beginning 17 years ago.

"It's such a good thing, not the money we raise, but the therapeutic value the patient interaction with the public," she said. "I've been involved with it since its beginning, and this is the last thing I'd want to see

By LORIE FUNK
Universe Staff Writer

Seventeen years ago, the Utah State Hospital began a haunted house fundraiser to buy a movie projector for their patients.

That year's fund-raiser grossed $59.

The following year, profits from the haunted house increased to $150. With combined earnings from those two years, the hospital was able to buy a movie projector.

Minnie Johnson, a psychiatric and recreational aide at the hospital, remembers that first haunted house attempt.

"I even remember fighting the administration when they were going to keep the money for themselves. I made them keep it for the projector," she said.

Since the hospital's first haunted house 17 years ago, attendance has steadily increased.

Last October the hospital earned nearly $40,000 profit from their haunted house, with 2,500 people touring the castle chambers.

Profits were equally distributed to each ward at the hospital to provide for recreational activities such as campouts and field trips.

The castle where the haunted house is staged plays a big part in the haunted house production.

Originally a recreation project built in 1937 by the Works Project Administration, the castle was restored in 1976.

Sets inside the castle are designed with individual "rooms of horror" and dark, spooky hallways to keep people in anticipation for what will happen next.

"A combination of the State Hospital atmosphere and the castle set against the shadowy mountains provides an excellent place to have a haunted house," said Johnson.

This year the hospital hopes to increase their ticket sales and keep lines shorter by pre-selling tickets at Hart's convenience stores and Taylor Maid beauty supply stores.

"We've put a lot of work into this year's haunted house," said Kelly, a patient. "It's going to be outrageous."

The haunted house opens Oct. 24 and runs until Oct. 31.

Tours begin at 7 p.m. and go until 10 p.m. weeknights and 11 p.m. on weekends. The haunted house will be closed Sunday, Oct. 26.

The entire castle tour lasts about 30 minutes, and it is recommended that children under the age of 5 not go through the castle.

New dinner theater comes to BYU

There is a new dinner theater experience on campus this week.

BLT Productions and the BYU Theater Department is presenting Neil Simon's "Star Spangled Girl" in the Elizabeth Room of the Step-Down Lounge, SFLC.

Performances will be Monday through Thursday at 6 p.m. Hors d'oeuvres will be served on Monday with tickets costing $3. A complete dinner will be served Tuesday through Thursday, and tickets will be $7.50.

Director Donald Steward said BLT's goal is to showcase new actors and to develop grass-roots talent. "A bunch of theater students got together and decided to do something off campus because only juniors and seniors get to do anything on the regular stage. (Our goal is to) do more experimental, less programmed types of things."

The cast of "Star Spangled Girl" will feature Kevin Gardner, Paul Manwaring and Andrea Gappmeyer. "The set is a giant mural of Lenin and Marx," said Steward, explaining that the comedy is about two left-wing writers who become involved with a zealously patriotic girl. He added that the dinner served will be chicken Kiev and apple pie.

Steward also said that eventually BLT hopes to produce children's theater from the money raised from the dinner-theater productions.

BLT Productions stands for The Basic Little Theater Company.

The group hopes to do more dinner theater productions in the future.

"Y" Guy Calendar

Through a lighted glass door, steps the figure of an exhausted man into the cool night air. Behind him the muffled theme music to "Hawaii Five-O" can be heard as the doors of the Harold B. Lee Library close on another endless day. While the "Y" Guy walks into the darkness, thoughts of chemistry and physics quickly fade, replaced by the visage of a face. A face more delicate than a rose petal, more gentle than a summer breeze.

The "Y" Guy has tickets for Homecoming. Will he see the woman who haunts his thoughts in time to ask her to the dance? ...

vacuuming soothes the vacuous dishes are favorite chore

WANE R. SISK
Senior Staff Writer

A recent national survey showed that the favorite household chore of most Americans is doing the dishes. However, some BYU students do not agree with this. Those BYU students asked, vacuuming is their favorite household chore and cleaning the bathroom is their favorite. Reading, a junior from Normal, Ill., majoring in elementary education, said she likes vacuuming because it is an immediate, noticeable result and the house looks cleaner after it has been vacuumed. Several people said they enjoy vacuuming because it is a very little effort or concentration. Johnson, a senior from Fairfax, Va., majoring in zoology, said vacuuming is mindless and allows him to think of other things. The other chores that were mentioned were doing the straightening the living room and dusting. "I like doing the dishes because I do them so often and there is something therapeutic about the water," said Matsu, a junior from Kailua, Hawaii, majoring in psychology. The students said they do not have a favorite chore. Davidson, a senior from Honolulu, Hawaii, majoring in zoology, said he does not have a favorite household chore because he feels housework is a waste of time. However, Marcia Dierking, a senior from Clarksville, Tenn., majoring in speech pathology, said she does not have a favorite chore, but that she likes to do everything.

"I love a clean house and I like to clean. It's fun," she said.

The least favorite chore of almost every student asked is cleaning the bathroom.

Julie Barke, a senior from Big Fork, Mont., majoring in fashion merchandising, said she hates the bathroom because it gets dirty so fast.

"I hate scrubbing the bathroom because of all the chemicals I have to use — and toilets are gross," said Janine Lawrence, a senior from Rockville, Md., majoring in elementary education.

Several of the students said they did not like the bathroom because of all of the germs.

"I do not like to scrub toilets because it is unsanitary," said Holly Snowden, a senior from Coinjock, N.C., majoring in zoology.

Rudy Dominguez, a senior from Provo majoring in elementary education, said his least favorite chore is doing the dishes because he hates to stand.

He said he would much rather buy paper plates and simply throw them away.

"I do not like to clean the oven because it is so messy and it takes so long. And I can't scrub the inside top without disconnecting my arm," said Matsu.

Most of the students asked said they did not really mind having to do housework because it is something that has to be done.

Lawrence said she hates to do housework when she is forced. She said sometimes she gets in the cleaning mood and loves it, and sometimes she hates it.

"I enjoy housework after I am finished because it gives me a sense of accomplishment," said Fite chore, but she likes to do everything.

Innovative music featured

One who walks past the de Jong Concert Hall on Monday, Oct. 21, at 7:30 p.m. might think the concert hall is overrun by more than one band or orchestra to take center stage.

One source of confusion could come from one of the featured numbers by the Wind Symphony, "Country March." It is the story of a young boy who gets tired of celebrations at Putnam's Camp, a Revolutionary battle site, and leaves the festivities.

From a new vantage point he hears a cacophony of sounds created by many bands that blend in his ear as one.

As a result, in this piece, six or seven different motifs are blended together, with identifiable strains being heard from time to time.

Students and faculty are invited to attend this innovative music by early 20th-century composer Charles Ives. Part of a combined concert of Wind Symphony and Chamber Soloists at BYU.

These are the premiere groups in the band and orchestra," said David Blackinton, director of Wind Symphony. The combined concert, a first for us, represents our commitment to create more performing opportunities for our better students. This collaboration really excites us."

Clyn Barrus directs the Chamber Soloists, who will perform the Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 in G Major by Bach and Symphony No. 4, "The Italian," op. 90 by Mendelssohn.

The Wind Symphony will perform "Symphonic March on an English Hymn Tune" by Claude T. Smith, Sarabande and Polka by Malcolm Arnold, "Allerseelen" by Richard Strauss and the "Country Band" march by Ives.

A unique feature of the performance will be Concertina in C by Carl Maria von Weber. It represents band music written by a music master in a style not usually associated with him.

"There was music that would be the equivalent of our band even back to the time of Bach," said Blackinton. "Unfortunately most of it was lost, but through research, some is being uncovered. I hope to highlight a pre-20th century master in my band concerts on a regular basis."

BYU faculty oboist Darrel Stubbs will be a special guest at the performance.

The concert is free, but tickets are required. They can be picked-up at the Music Ticket Office, HFAC.

Jazz quartet prepares for concert

The Faculty Jazz Quartet is preparing a memorable concert of Tuesday, Oct. 21, featuring compositions by some of the most recognized contemporary jazz composers.

The recital will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall and admission is free.

The plan to have the audience clicking its fingers and stomping its toes during many numbers," said Ron Brough, a member of the quartet and a percussion specialist at BYU. "Other selections will be more soulful and blues oriented."

Members of the quartet are Ray Smith on woodwinds, Steve Call on piano and brass, Jeff Campbell on bass, and Ron Brough on drums.

BYU's Lakei Heimuli grounds out some of his 177 rushing yards against the Cowboys Saturday.

BYU dominates Cowboys

By DAVID BUXTON Assistant Sports Editor

Wyoming's hopes of an undefeated WAC season and victories over both of last year's champs were shattered Saturday when BYU dominated them in every aspect of the game, coming away with a 34-22 victory in Laramie.

The mental breaking of the Cowboys was nearly complete by the end of the first quarter.

The War Memorial record crowd of 31,742 knew their team was in for a long day when the Cougars scored two touchdowns and a field goal, BYU defensive back Jeff Wilcox made two interceptions, and the Pokes managed a meager three yards total offense within the first 15 minutes.

The second quarter was a little better for the Pokes only because BYU seemed to let up some offensively while Wyoming's offense showed some signs of life.

Still, BYU scored five more points, two of them with a blocked Cowboy punt in the endzone for a safety, and held Wyoming scoreless to take a 22-0 halftime lead.

"It was a very satisfying victory for us," Head Coach LaVell Edwards said following the game. "Wyoming plays very spirited football and they made some big plays."

Wyoming mounted a comeback in the second half, and the game was somewhat tight in the last few minutes of the game — despite a BYU 12-point lead — because of a slight shift in momentum for Wyoming.

The Cowboys opened the second half scoring, and seemed to be picking up speed. They started their drive with good field position after a penalty and a quarterback sack forced BYU to punt from the endzone in a fourth-and-23 situation.

It took just three plays to cover the 46 yards needed for the touchdown. The first play of the drive was a reverse that fooled nearly everyone with Wyoming split end Norris Thompson sweeping around the left side for a 31-yard pickup.

Two plays later quarterback Randy Welniak ran 16 yards untouched into the endzone for Wyoming's first score. A successful two-point conversion made the score 22-8.

With momentum on the side of Wyoming and the crowd finally having a chance to cheer for their team, BYU took control and showed what it takes to win 10 straight conference championships.

Starting on their own 14-yard line, the Cougars put together a made-for-the-highlight-films drive that Edwards called "one of the best drives we've put together all year."

After moving 52 yards on seven straight running plays, quarterback Steve Lindsley hit wide receiver Mark Bellini on the one-yard line for a 33-yard gain.

The BYU men's team also ran in the combined meet and finished fifth in a field of ten.

The women finished behind Texas and Wisconsin. The Lady Longhorns upset the No.1 Wisconsin team.

Julie Jenkins led BYU as she finished 11th in the meet with a time of 17:17 in the 5,000 meter race. Other BYU finishes were 14th, Angela Cook 17:18; 21st Noleen Mullan 17:26; 22nd Nancy Anderson 17:26; 45th Nicole Keller 17:57; 56th Rebecca Chamberlain 18:10; 62nd Melanie Child 18:17 and 66th, Lisa Burgoyne 18:24.

SDSU only unbeaten WAC team

By The Associated Press

The San Diego State Aztecs remained the only undefeated team in the WAC as they defeated the UTEP Miners 15-10 to improve to 3-0 in the league.

Aztec junior quarterback Todd Santos passed for 183 yards. Santos returned to action after recovering from a broken wrist.

In the third quarter Miner quarterback Sam Garza capped a 43-yard scoring drive with eight-yard touchdown pass to fullback Tommy Bonds, making the score 12-7.

Kevin Rahill added a field goal for the Aztecs as SDSU moved to a 15-7 lead.

The Miners drove to the Aztecs' 16-yard line in the fourth quarter but had to settle for a field goal.

At Fort Collins, Colo., running-back Steve Bartalo racked up his 23rd 100-yard game as Colorado State rolled to a 31-7 victory over Hawaii.

The Rams moved to 4-2 overall and 2-1 in league play, while Hawaii dropped to 3-2 and 2-2.

Bartalo, already the top rusher in WAC history, finished with 108 yards on 37 carries to push his career total to 4,054 yards. He also moved past the 1,000-carry mark (1,032 total) and into the No. 2 on the all-time NCAA list, behind Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett.

At Albuquerque, N.M., scrambling quarterback Ned James hit halfback Kevin Burgess with a 10-yard scoring pass with 2:37 left in the game Saturday night, and New Mexico came up with a final-minute goal line stand to take a 47-43 victory over Utah in a matchup of the nation's two worst defensive teams.

The game wasn't decided until Utah halfback Eddie Johnson was stopped short of the goal line on a fourth-and-one situation with 19 seconds left.

Utah had first-and-goal at the two and failed to get in after three running plays and an incomplete pass.

The win, the second in a row for New Mexico after five losses, gives the Lobos a 2-3 mark in the WAC and a 2-5 overall record.

Utah dropped to 0-5 overall and 0-4 in the conference.

At South Bend, Ind., Tim Brown returned a kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown, inspiring a Notre Dame offense that rushed for three more touchdowns as the Irish thumped Air Force 31-3. Air Force, 5-2, had come from behind to win three times this season, but failed to score after Chris Hardy kicked a 32-yard field goal late in the first quarter.

Quarterback Steve Beuerlein, fullback Pernell Taylor and tailback Anthony Johnson each scored for Notre Dame, 2-4, on one-yard runs against an Air Force line that allowed the Irish 237 rushing yards.

Adam Johnson of USC tries to spike over BYU's Doug Pinckney in Saturday volleyball action. BYU beat the No. 2 Trojans 3-1.

Spikers block out 2nd-ranked USC

By RAND WALTON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's volleyball team defused one of the nation's most explosive offenses Friday night with a victory over the University of Southern California.

It took four games of the best-of-five match for the Cougars to upset the NCAA second-ranked Trojans in the Smith Fieldhouse.

"The key to our winning was blocking," said Cougar middle blocker Lane Peterson.

From the start, the Cougar blockers established themselves at the net by blocking the Trojan hitters.

Along with Peterson, outside hitters Doug Pinckney and Sam Atoa combined to form a wall that the Trojans could not penetrate.

"I was pleased at times with our blocking," said BYU coach Tom Peterson. "We blocked better tonight than we did in practice all week."

On offense, the Cougar front row players were able to find gaps in the Trojan defense to score points.

In the first game, BYU streaked to an 11-3 lead before the Trojans staged a comeback. However, the Cougars held on for a 15-10 win.

Short, quick sets followed by spikes from Cougar middle blockers Peterson and Pat Lindhal hurt the Trojan blockers throughout the match. "Our play in the middle worked better tonight than in years past," commented Coach Peterson. "They couldn't stop Lane."

Neither team in game two was able to pull away from the opponent. However, service errors plagued the Trojans, allowing BYU to break away for a victory.

Game three found the Cougars jump to an early 2-0 lead, but USC All-American outside hitter Adam Johnson pounded shots through the defense to earn the win for the Trojans.

Despite the efforts of Yoder and Johnson in game four, the power hitting of Pinckney carried the Cougars to the match victory.

BYU assistant coach Rich Cortez felt that team unity and motivation helped the Cougars in its victory. "The team clicked. At times we slowed down but we were able to pull together and win," he added.

Lane Peterson led the Cougars with 22 kills, while the Trojans' Johnson led all hitters with 23 kills.

Though it was the Trojans' first match of the year, USC coach Bob Yoder felt the Cougars made his team play poorly.

"Even when we tried to buckle down, we couldn't get it together and win," he added.

THEY'RE BACK!

Stephenson. This combination will prove to be a winning team for the 1986-87 Cougars; perhaps the best since the Ainge Era!

The action begins on Thursday, November 6 with the Varsity Preview in the Marriott Center.

riday should expect conditions to improve. Those people who can continue to hunt should expect to do better, said Worthen.

Determining the age of the animals being harvested is one of the main reasons for setting up deer checking stations. Of the 260 deer checked on Sunday, 188 were yearlings.

Most hunters recognize a yearling buck by his horns. They usually have either a single horn or two points on each antler. Exact age is determined by the deer's teeth according to Worthen.

Hunting law violations is another reason for checking deer. Several laws concerning transporting deer were changed this year. Worthen said he hasn't yet seen a single violation of the new law.

The most common problem is lost licenses. Quite often a hunter will lose or misplace his license after tagging his deer, Worthen explained. It's terribly embarrassing for the hunters to have a legally tagged deer but not be able to find the license that tag came from. Worthen accredited compliance to the new laws to high media exposure.

Everyone seemed to know about it," he said.

Deanne Winkel, a communications major with an emphasis in broadcasting, is crowned the new Miss BYU.

Broadcasting major named new Miss BYU

By KIMBERLEY WRIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

Deanne Winkel, a senior majoring in broadcast journalism from Federal Way, Wash., was chosen Thursay as the 1986-87 Miss BYU.

Also selected by the eight-member judge's panel was first attendant Tessa Meyer, a junior majoring in English/linguistics from Cape Town, South Africa, and second attendant Mary Lynn Bahr, a sophomore majoring in English from Bountiful, Utah.

Winkel, who sang a vocal solo called "Reach Out" she wrote and arranged herself, displayed "competent speaking skills and an unwavering self-confidence on stage," said K.B. James, a junior majoring business management from San Antonio, Texas.

"My lips were shaking to death!" Winkel said minutes after Lisle Taylor, last year's homecoming queen, crowned her the winner.

Being the oldest finalist in the competition, Winkel said she entered the contest because of a terrible experience she had in a similar pageant when she was 18.

"For 30 seconds I couldn't talk; I completely froze on stage, so I wanted to get back on the horse," said the current KBYU-TV weather anchor.

Meyer, a Kimball scholar who recently won the Human Rights Symposium Essay Contest, displayed her talent by dramatizing a sketch titled, "Message to Rob," which she wrote herself. Meyer also teaches Africaans at the Missionary Training Center.

For her talent portion of the pageant, Bahr played a piano solo titled "Gardens in the Rain," by Claude Debussy. She plans to do graduate work in English or comparative literature and become a professor.

Singer Ron Williams was master of ceremonies along with Sharlene Wells, a former Miss BYU and Miss America. Williams is currently promoting a new album that will be released nationwide.

"The pageant was very professionally done — I was impressed," Williams said.

"Being on this stage was a lot easier this time than when I competed," added Wells.

The contestants were judged on talent, evening gowns and their responses to a question-and-answer session at the final competition held Thursday night.

The theme of the pageant was "Celebrate a Tradition of Elegance."

The stage was decorated to look like a fancy hotel lobby. The tables were decorated with white tablecloths, black top hats, white gloves and a long-stemmed red rose.

This whole concept was designed to give the ELWC Ballroom a feeling of elegance.

Soviet dissident writes story of exile

BOSTON (AP) — Soviet authorities won Yelena Bonner's silence during her recent visit to the United States, but the wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov gets her say about life in a KGB fishbowl in a book that appeared last week.

In "Alone Together" Bonner chronicles the frustrations and uncertainties of exile in Gorky which began for Sakharov in 1980 and for her in 1984.

"I think if there were no restriction on her talking to the press when she was in the United States, then maybe no book," said her daughter, Tanya Yankelevich of the Boston suburb of Newton.

"But I think there was a need for her to speak this word so people can learn about the Sakharovs if they want to. And I think there was an urge to relieve herself of all the suffering."

Bonner, who returned to the Soviet Union in early June after visiting relatives and receiving treatment for heart problems, tells of a life in which the couple can go to a movie but also can be filmed on the way by government agents who might use the footage to show they are not restricted.

She details her trial for slander, the abduction and force-feeding of Sakharov during a hunger strike, the suspicions and fears born of the constant presence of guards, and occasional tamperings with their belongings.

Their detention also leads to occasional absurdities, she wrote in the 264-page book:

"Whenever the authorities did not like something, it was our car that suffered. Either two tires would be punctured, or a window smashed or smeared with glue."

This was how we knew we had done something bad by their standards."

Her family and publisher are billing the book as a love story, and the tough-talking Bonner waxes gentle whenever she speaks of Sakharov.

But she lashes out at his detractors and expresses disappointment with well-wishers in the United States for not knowing enough about his work.

Appalachian region falters under economic pressure

CHARLESTON, W. Va (AP) — The Appalachian region is suffering an economic crisis under the weight of poverty, hunger and hopelessness, a new study concludes.

"The crisis is very real," said the Rev. R. Holmquist, coordinator of a task force that reported its findings last week to the Commission on Religion in Appalachia. "There is hunger everywhere you go . . . There are people so far down the economic ladder that their self-esteem is destroyed. People are being pushed to the very margins."

The task force spent a year tracking the economic health of Appalachia. CORA is made up of 18 religious denominations and was founded "to build community and combat poverty."

Holmquist said the study documents what should be a national concern. "It's not a matter of subjective impressions," he said. "The facts are there. What we have in Appalachia are the makings of an underclass that is mostly white. The middle class is disappearing."

Couple's electronic meeting results in a romantic ending at CB seminar

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An electronic bond, which started as a computer relationship, resulted in a couple exchanging marriage vows; reports an information management journal.

These vows were viewed by hundreds of friends and relatives over their home computers.

The newlyweds "met" on a CB simulator — an electronic conferencing program — that enables a subscriber with a microcomputer and modem to access any one of 72 channels, reports MIS Week.

Each channel can accommodate a number of users, allowing an entire group to converse party-line style.

The man, a sheet-metal mechanic who is deaf and lives in Texas, found himself able to converse freely with a woman systems analyst in California.

The computer meeting, according to the publication, led to "digital courting over the national network for six months before their first encounter."

When they finally met, it was as if they were old friends.

The wedding took place at a CB seminar and party attended by more than 100 CB fans whose travel arrangements were made through online subscriber computer services.
